- Parents are required to complete the household size worksheet in an effort to get more accurate information about the number in the parent’s household and the number of those in the household who are in college. Some information will be prefilled, based on responses provided previously within the FAFSA form. The system tallies the totals as the parent completes the worksheet to ensure that there are no mathematical errors.
- You will want to count the number of people living in your household/home, beginning with yourself, then your parent(s), and any other siblings or relatives for whom your parent(s) pay 50% or more of their financial support
- For “Number in College,” count yourself, but also include any siblings who will attend and be enrolled as part-time students, as well. You do not want to include your parents in this section, even if they are in college or a degree-seeking program. Adults who have already earned a degree, are in graduate or professional programs, or who are over the age of 24 will not be counted as simultaneously being in college during the same period as you.
